Between us and you a great chasm is established...

Luke 16:26

If are not, a times, made uncomfortable reading the Gospel, then it is likely we are not actually taking in the entire teaching of Jesus.

In today's Gospel, the rich man is in eternal torment in hell. He begs to have his suffering eased by just a drop of water. But to no avail. On the other hand, the poor man died and was carried off by angels to heaven. Moreover, there is a great chasm between the two that can never be crossed.

Jesus invites us to enter God's heavenly joy. But we have free will and can reject that invitation. In this case, the rich man rejected it by hoarding his wealth and not having pity on the poor. For such, an eternal torment is the end. Today's Gospel might make us feel uncomfortable. In our modern world, such teaching seem, to some, archaic. But if you believe Jesus' teaching to be true, how would you change your life?

Msgr. Stephen J. Rossetti.

Entre nosotros y tú se establece un gran abismo...

Lucas 16. 26

Si no se sienten incómodos leyendo el Evangelio, entonces es probable que en realidad no estemos asimilando toda la enseñanza de Jesús.

En el Evangelio de hoy, el hombre rico está en tormento eterno en el infierno. Ruega que su sufrimiento se alivie con solo una gota de agua. Pero fue en vano. Por otro lado, el pobre hombre murió y fue llevado por ángeles al cielo. Además, hay un gran abismo entre los dos que nunca se puede cruzar.

Jesús nos invita a entrar en el gozo celestial de Dios. Pero tenemos libre albedrío y podemos rechazar esa invitación. En este caso, el hombre rico lo rechazó acumulando su riqueza y no teniendo piedad de los pobres. Para ello, un tormento eterno es el fin. El Evangelio de hoy puede hacernos sentir incómodos. En nuestro mundo moderno, tal enseñanza parece, para algunos, arcaica. Pero si crees que la enseñanza de Jesús es verdadera, ¿cómo cambiarías tu vida?

Msgr. Stephen J. Rossetti.
